STATEWIDE CURRENT SITUATION: The Texas State Operations Center has again, activated for continued wildfire response operations, Monday, 28 March, 2022 at 8:00 AM. The state continues to respond to several large wildfires including the Eastland Complex, the Crittensburg Complex (Fort Hood, Bell, and Coryell Counties) and Das Goat (Medina County). Texas A&M Forest Service \(TAMFS\) received 10 new requests for assistance with fire suppression operations on Tuesday. Crews plan to staff eight (8) fires today, five (5) of which are carry over fires. Critical fire weather area for most of Southern Texas from the Big Bend to the Gulf of Mexico. Critical fire weather area for portions of the Texas Panhandle and North Texas.

On March 29, Governor Abbott encouraged Texans to remain vigilant and informed on weather conditions as fire danger and severe weather threaten the state. Significant portions of the western half of Texas are facing extreme fire weather conditions today and tomorrow due to high wind gusts, dry fuels, and low humidity. Primary areas of concern today for fires are the Panhandle, South Plains, and West Texas, with the risk shifting to much of the southern half of the state tomorrow. (Complete Statement Here)

On March 27, Governor Abbott amended the Disaster Declaration, adding Medina County.

On March 21, Governor Abbott amended the Disaster Declaration, adding Blanco, Erath, Hood, Runnels, and Starr counties.

On March 18, Governor Abbott issued a Disaster Declaration due to an imminent threat of widespread or severe damage, injury, or loss of life or property in Brooks, Brown, Coleman, Comanche, Eastland, Grayson, Mason, Potter, Randall, and Williamson Counties.

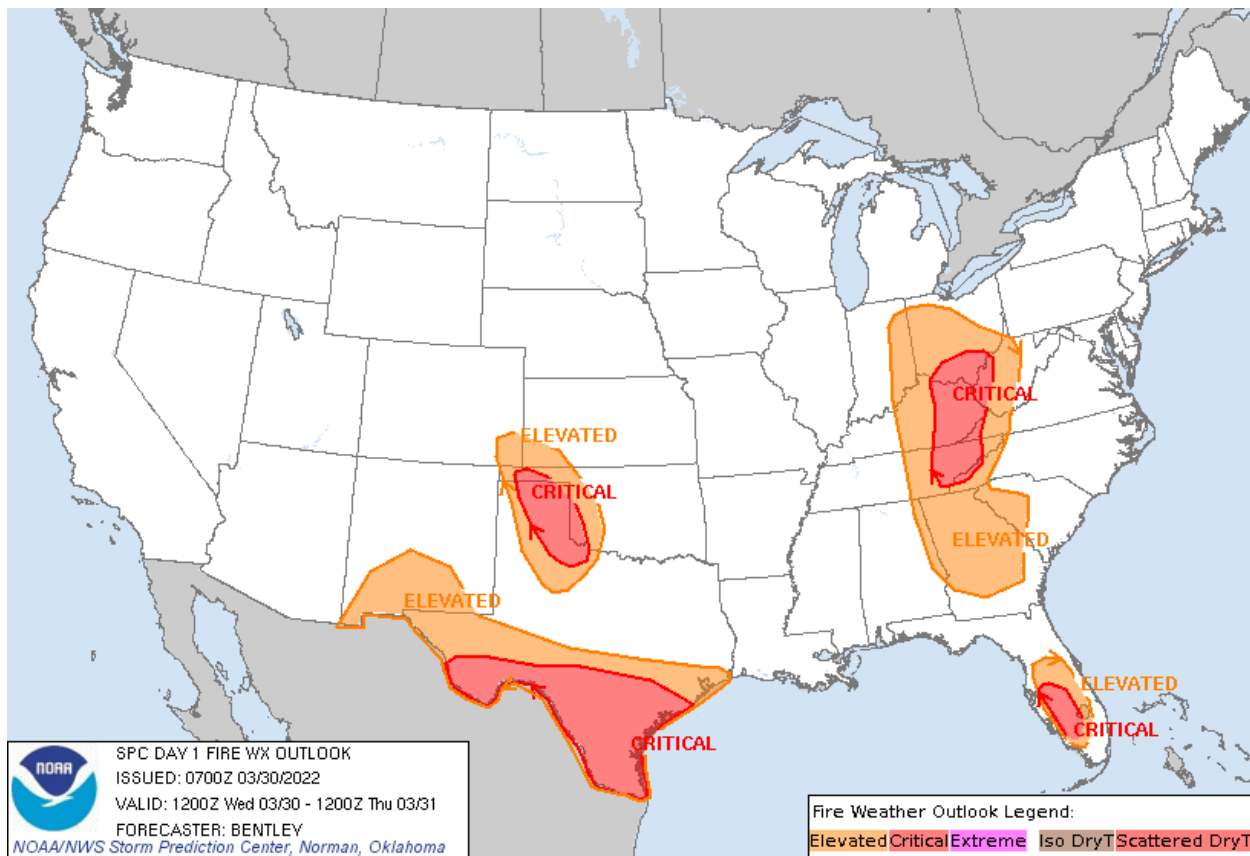

On March 16, Governor Abbott directed the Texas Division of Emergency Management (TDEM) to activate additional state resources as escalated fire weather conditions continue to impact the state this week. In addition, the Texas State Emergency Operations Center (SOC) is increasing readiness to Level II: Escalated Response for Critical Fire Weather Conditions. Representatives from key state agencies belonging to the Emergency Management Council reported to the SOC on Thursday, March 17 at 7:00 AM CT to assist in the state's response to fire weather conditions.

On March 15, Governor Abbott directed TDEM to mobilize state resources as Texas faces increased fire weather conditions this week. The National Weather Service warns high winds and low relative humidity has created heightened risk for wildfires in the western half of the state.

WEATHER:

NWS Fire Weather Outlook Valid: 6AM 3/30 to 6AM 3/31.

Day 1 Fire Weather Outlook: ...CRITICAL FIRE WEATHER AREA FOR MOST OF SOUTHERN TEXAS FROM THE BIG BEND TO THE GULF OF MEXICO...
 ...CRITICAL FIRE WEATHER AREA FOR PORTIONS OF THE TX/OK PANHANDLES INTO SOUTHWEST OKLAHOMA AND NORTH TEXAS...

A mid-level shortwave trough will move from South Texas to the eastern Great Lakes during the day today. A very strong surface low will deepen through the day as it moves from the Plains to the Great Lakes. This surface low will lead to a significant surface pressure gradient across much of the central and eastern CONUS and therefore, winds will be very strong. A dry airmass will be in place in several locations which will lead to fire weather concerns across broad regions in the CONUS.

...South Texas...

Once the dryline/cold front move east of the Plains this morning, a well-mixed airmass will remain across the southern Plains. Therefore, with minimal surface heating, very strong winds from aloft will start to transfer some of their momentum toward the surface. Sustained surface winds of 20 to 25 mph are expected from southern New Mexico to southeast Texas. Relative humidity will be drier with southern extent with values less than 15 percent near the Rio Grande and across far southern Texas. Fuels are very dry across the region with near-record ERCs across much of South Texas. The northern edge of the critical/elevated delineation attempts to track the southern extent of significant precipitation from overnight convection. There is still uncertainty with the southern extent of the wetting rains, which may necessitate shifts in the northern fringe of the threat during the outlook update late this morning.

Local extremely critical conditions cannot be ruled out across parts of South Texas from Del Rio to west of Corpus Christi. This is the region beneath the core of the mid-level jet where downward momentum transfer should be the greatest. However, the threat appears too localized/short lived to justify an extremely critical area.

...Far southeast Colorado southeastward to portions of North Texas...

A mid-level shortwave trough, currently near the Montana/North Dakota border, will move south through the day today. This will overspread moderate mid-level flow across the southern High Plains. A dry/well-mixed airmass will be in place in the wake of the dryline/cold front. Therefore, some of this stronger mid-level flow may reach the surface with winds of 15 to 25 mph expected and relative humidity of 15 to 25 percent. Additionally, this overlaps the region that had extremely critical fire weather conditions on Tuesday with numerous large fires. Therefore, any ongoing fires could start to run again today with a wind direction from the northwest.
